Kettle Moraine Land Trust

Kettle Moraine Land Trust is looking for your ideas! We are reaching out to local communities and asking for help to identify important land conservation sites and environmental programs for Walworth County. Conservation efforts are more successful when several organizations who share at least one common goal, work together. Goals like ensuring clean water, protecting agriculture and open space, access to nature areas and maintaining important wildlife habitat are common to many municipalities and local organizations. These goals are also key elements found in thriving cities and rural areas of southern Wisconsin.

To gather community ideas, Kettle Moraine Land Trust is meeting with individuals and groups and listening to thoughts and concerns about land conservation and environmental stewardship. As a local non-profit conservation organization, protecting important ecosystems including our working agriculture lands, ensuring healthy lakes and streams, and providing community parks, are benefits we bring to communities throughout Walworth County.

Everybody needs beauty as well as bread, places to play in and pray in, where nature may heal and give strength to body and soul. --John Muir

Why Does Nature Matter?

Physical: In nature one can find a variety of settings for various levels of informal recreation such as hiking, canoeing, fishing, running and cycling.

Mental: Nature restores us from mental fatigue, provides artistic inspiration and educational development.

Spiritual: Preserving the natural environment allows for reflection, inspiration, a sense of place, and a connection to something beyond human concerns.

Social: Families, couples, seniors and students; social clubs and organizations of all types find rewarding personal relationships through picnics, events, festivals and casual encounters in nature.

Environmental: Preserving ecosystems and biodiversity provides clean water, ensures wildlife species health, and maintains critical ecosystem functions such as clean air and drinking water.
